This geographical situation of proximity to the islands, combined with commercial port infrastructures, promotes maritime ferry traffic. Moreover, the cruise activity has largely developed in the Mediterranean, benefiting from favourable weather conditions and dedicated infrastructures: the region represents the second world market for this sector, after - has largely developed in the Mediterranean, benefiting from favourable weather conditions and dedicated infrastructures: the region represents the second world market for this sector, after the Caribbean (Di -Méglio et al., 2010). Finally, more than 700 marinas are listed in the Mediterranean basin. Vessel types 1.5 Astudy conducted by the Quiet Oceans consultancy on behalf of WWF (Gallou and Folegot, 2020) analysed shipping traffic in the North -Western Mediterranean, using AIS data from 2019. In terms of distance travelled in this area, passenger ships and cargo ships travel by far the greatest distance, followed by motorized pleasure craft and fishing vessels. Traffic characteristics 1.6 Freight traffic is higher in winter, in the northern part of the study area, along the coasts of the Gulf of Lion, towards Barcelona and with Corsica and Sardinia. Passenger traffic is highly structured around links between the main ports of France, Spain and Italy on the one hand, and Corsica, the Balearic Islands, Sardinia and the Tuscan archipelago on the other. Traffic intensity increases significantly during the summer months for passenger transport - hand, and Corsica, the Balearic Islands, Sardinia and the Tuscan archipelago on the other. Traffic intensity increases significantly during the summer months for passenger transport between the Mediterranean islands and the mainlan d, as well as with additional connections to North Africa and Barcelona and with cruise activity (see figures 5 and 6). 1.7 More than two thirds of the vessels using the study area (68% in winter and 71% in summer) fly a European flag, representing more than 70% of the cumulative distances travelled, whatever the season.
